MINISTER MUST PAY WIFE

Rev. Francis Rolt-Wheeler to Lose $7 of His $20 a Week.

Broken in health, living in a small room with her two children, and doing her best to support them by her work as a sculptor, Mrs. Christine Rolt-Wheeler, of 509 West 121st Street, obtained an allowance of $7 a week yesterday from her husband.

The defendant before Magistrate Cornell in the Court of Domestic Relations was the Roy Francis Rolt.

Cornell in the Court of Domestic Relations was the Rev. Francis Rolt-Wheeler, for eight years chaplain of St. Luke's Hospital; author, lecturer for the Board of Education, and former newspaper man. Complaint was filed two weeks ago, and since then an investigator has learned that while the wife paid 50 cents a night for her room the husband maintained an office in a woman's apartment at 589 Lexington Avenue and had moved his furniture there.

the only regular income he had was from his lectures, which paid about $20 as week. He denied he had refused to support his family, and declared he had paid $16 a week for their board in had paid $16 a week for their board in Rockville Centre, Long Island, and Rutherford, N. J. turned to New York in March, she said, because she had no money.

Mrs. Wheeler said the defendant received $30 a week from his writings. She became his wife in 1901, when he was twenty-five years old. At that time he was night editor of "The Chicago Daily Chronicle," having worked previously in Winnipeg, Grand Forks, N. D., and Minneapolis. Their two children are Roger, thirteen, and Mona, eighteen months old.
